“What does the day-to-day life of a wildlife database administrator look like?” was one of the questions we had for ranger Simon Nakito during a quick one-on-one interview.

We got to learn a lot about this all-important role which is the backbone of the wildlife department. Simon is tasked with managing rhino records, catering to the rangers’ welfare, ration, and equipment supply. He also coordinates relations between wildlife and other departments and manages human-wildlife conflict among other administrative tasks.

Mr. Nakito also spoke to us about the achievement he is most proud of, surpassing the rhino goal. “I am proud that we have surpassed our rhino population of more than 200 rhinos, it was no easy feat but our boots on the ground have ensured that the rhino population continues to flourish, he said.”

Given that Simon and other rangers presently play a crucial role in keeping things on the rails in terms of conservation, what does the future of conservation look like for him?

For Simon, the future of conservation is Kenya. “I look forward to a future where Kenyans are more involved in conserving our national heritage and also the government’s continued support in providing initiatives to encourage conservation amongst Kenyans.”

“Finally, what are the vital bush survival skills?” We sought to find out. “Stay alert in the wild, observing your environment. It’s also important to understand animal behavior as this will come in handy when it comes to handling a situation in the wild. Knowing animal behavior will teach you that you cannot handle a lion encounter the same way you handle an encounter with a rhino.”
Ol Pejeta recently had the honour of being named ‘Africa’s Leading Conservation Company’ at The World Travel Awards. This was in an elaborate event that took place on 15 October 2022 at the Kenyatta International Convention Centre (KICC) in Nairobi Kenya.

Speaking after the event Ken Kimani, the Chief Commercial Officer said, “It’s undoubtedly an honour to be recognized by one of the most prestigious awards programme in travel and tourism. Getting the ultimate industry accolade elevates our brand and recognizes all the hard work that our team members have put in.”

"THE ULTIMATE INDUSTRY ACCOLADE ELEVATES OUR BRAND AND RECOGNIZES ALL THE HARD WORK THAT OUR TEAM MEMBERS HAVE PUT IN,"

- KEN KIMANI CHIEF COMMERCIAL OFFICER.

Samuel Mutisya Head of Wildlife Conservation also said, “Ol Pejeta’s victory is for all of us. It has come from everyone playing their part, from our rangers who have ensured that our rhino population continues to thrive with more than 200 0f them. The innovation team that guarantees we are up to date with the latest wildlife- protection technology. We cannot also forget the livestock team who ensure that our rangelands are flourishing and the rest of the Ol Pejeta team who have kept the conservation wheel turning.”

Ol Pejeta’s story is full of hope and possibility. This Eden of African wilderness is a reminder of how life began, humbling in its extraordinary beauty. In all its untouched glory, the Conservancy is both a piece of living history and a model for the future.

Finding practical solutions for wildlife conservation is at the forefront of everything we do. This includes ensuring that this wild space and everything in it can be of tangible benefit to the people who live alongside it, and the many challenges it brings.

Ultimately, we are working towards a future that might otherwise slip away in the fight for space and resources. A future where animals still roam free in nature, where they have been for millenia, and should always be. This critical work requires a huge amount of funding. Part of Ol Pejeta’s ethos is to ensure we generate commercial revenues for long term sustainability, but the scope of our mission inevitably outweighs our revenue streams, and depends upon the kindness of our visitors and supporters. Donating to Ol Pejeta in any form is a vote for the world you want to live in.

Making conservation a financial and ethical priority is the only way that this very special corner of the world is around for future generations to enjoy. Visit either of our adoption centres - at Sweetwaters Chimpanzee Sanctuary or Morani’s Information Centre - to learn more about our donation options.
